

also apparently for Annenberg, and Thompson McGuire, head of the McGuire & White Detective Agency.

Shortly after the Bachrach-Thomson-McGuire combination, a representative of the Illinois Surety Company strolled into the station, and it was discovered that he was there to go bond for the Tribune slugger so he would not have to endure a moment in jail.

In court, Policeman Michael Weisbaum signed a complaint charging assault with a deadly weapon with intent to murder against Annenberg. Annenberg was arraigned.

After a long argument, Bachrach was permitted to schedule $20,000 worth of property, and this along with Tom McGuire's $25,000 worth, was accepted for the bond.
